

After a Long, Hot Summer, Fallon Solutions Urges Queensland Homeowners to Check Air Conditioners for Hidden Wear and Tear

Brisbane, QLD - 24th February 2026

Following a prolonged period of hot and humid summer conditions across Queensland, Fallon Solutions is urging homeowners to book post summer air conditioning inspections to address hidden wear and tear that can lead to breakdowns, poor performance, and rising energy bills.

Extended heatwaves, high humidity, and near constant usage place significant strain on air conditioning systems, particularly in South East Queensland where many units run daily for months at a time.

“Air conditioners often keep running even when critical components are under stress,” said Mike Preston, General Manager - Air Conditioning at Fallon Solutions. “By the time a system fails completely, homeowners are often dealing with discomfort, emergency callouts, and higher repair costs. February is the ideal time to assess the impact summer has had.”

Fallon Solutions technicians commonly identify issues such as clogged filters, restricted airflow, refrigerant inefficiencies, electrical component fatigue, and early signs of motor and compressor wear following prolonged summer use. Left unchecked, these issues can shorten system lifespan and increase operating costs.

To support proactive maintenance, Fallon Solutions is encouraging homeowners to consider its Home Protection Plans, which are designed to help families stay ahead of seasonal wear and tear. Members receive priority service, ongoing discounts, and complimentary inspections including a free air-conditioner filter clean, helping restore airflow, improve efficiency, and support healthier indoor air quality after summer.

“Dirty filters are one of the most common issues we see after a long summer,” Preston said. “A simple filter clean can significantly improve performance, and it’s one of the practical benefits our Home Protection Plan members appreciate.”

Fallon Solutions provides air conditioning servicing, repairs, and replacements across Brisbane, Gold Coast, Sunshine Coast, Ipswich, Logan, Redlands, and Moreton Bay. All work is carried out by licensed technicians and supported by a limited lifetime labour warranty.
