

SEQ homeowners urged to prepare air conditioning, plumbing and electrical systems before the summer rush

Brisbane, QLD — 18th August 2026

Fallon Solutions is encouraging South East Queensland homeowners to use the final weeks of winter to prepare their homes for warmer weather, warning that air-conditioning servicing, repairs and installs can become more difficult to address once summer demand increases.

Managing Director Jackson Whipps said pre-summer preparation allowed homeowners to make considered decisions before hot weather, storms and increased demand placed greater pressure on essential home systems.

“Summer preparation is not only about turning the air conditioner on and hoping it works,” Mr Whipps said. “It is about looking at the systems the household will depend on during the warmer months and dealing with emerging problems before they become urgent. The benefit of acting early is that homeowners have more time to understand the issue, compare appropriate solutions and choose an option that suits their home, priorities and budget,” he said.

Air-conditioning servicing is one of the most important pre-summer checks because dust, mould, bacteria and grime can accumulate inside systems during the year. Warning signs can include musty smells, weak airflow, reduced cooling, visible dirt or a system that has not been professionally cleaned within the past 12 months.

Fallon Solutions now offers Bronze, Silver and Gold air-conditioning service packs, providing variable levels of cleaning, system assessment and preventative care.

“Different homes and systems require different levels of attention,” Mr Whipps said.

“One customer may only need a professional clean and performance check, while another may need more thorough drainage, mould or component treatment.

Homeowners considering replacing an older air conditioner are also being encouraged to act before peak-season installation demand. Fallon Solutions is currently offering a 2.0 kW Daikin air conditioner from $2,933 fully installed, subject to site conditions and offer terms.

Mr Whipps said the pre-summer period was also an appropriate time to complete plumbing repairs before heavier rainfall and storm activity. “A leaking fixture, drainage concern or unresolved plumbing problem may be easier to manage now than during a period of heavy rain or increased household demand,” he said.

“Small issues rarely improve on their own, and early attention can reduce inconvenience and the likelihood of more extensive damage.”

Fallon Solutions is also highlighting the approaching Queensland smoke-alarm deadline.

All existing private homes, townhouses, units and manufactured homes in Queensland must have compliant interconnected photoelectric smoke alarms by 1 January 2027. Required alarms must be interconnected so that when one activates, all required alarms activate.

Mr Whipps said homeowners who had not yet confirmed compliance should avoid leaving inspections or upgrades until the final months before the deadline. “This is a significant statewide deadline, and demand is likely to grow as 1 January approaches,” he said. “Booking a compliance assessment early gives homeowners time to understand what is already installed, what may need to be replaced and what work is required.”

Fallon Solutions is offering a $198 Smoke Alarm Compliance Check and Certificate, with a complimentary upgrade to its Red Professional alarm range where eligible new alarms are required under the current promotion.

“The key message is to prepare before the seasonal rush,” Mr Whipps said. “A small amount of planning now can help households enter summer with greater comfort, safety and confidence.”
